

University of North Alabama
FERPA Consent to Release Form

As a current or former student, the information contained in your education records at the University of North Alabama (UNA) is protected by a Federal privacy law known as the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). Except under limited exceptions specified in FERPA, school officials can only share your education records or discuss information from your records with third parties if you provide “prior written consent” — that is, your explicit permission in writing. This consent may be revoked any time by providing written notice to the University official who consent was originally submitted.

By signing below you indicate that you understand that consenting to this disclosure is voluntary and this consent will remain in effect from the date signed until revoked in writing.

I, _____, hereby give permission and authorization to UNA officials to communicate and share information and materials relating to my education record: specifically, information relating to student conduct matters, including information related to matters within the Office of Title IX. All other information from an educational record not described is protected from release unless otherwise stated.

Please indicate to whom you grant consent for specific release of information from your educational record:

I expressly consent to the foregoing:
